

SCRIPT
MEMORY

(Two people are talking. One of them is reading a newspaper)

P1: I can't believe it! Really?! It's ridiculous! Look! (he's pointing at a newspaper). Taxes have increased again! They make us pay, but we even don't know what this money is for. In this country there are only obligations.

P2: What do you mean by saying "only obligations"? Don't exaggerate! We also have plenty of rights and privileges.

P1: Yeah, sure! If so, give me at least one example...

P2: A piece of cake! I can give you examples from your own life.

MEMORY1 (Group of students are sitting on chairs. There is a lesson- geography; a teacher is conducting a lesson)

Teacher: ...here is Pompeii, it was destroyed by Vesuvius eruption in 79...

(students are disturbing a teacher)

Teacher: Be quiet! Don't talk, please. Appreciate the fact that I'm standing here and trying to teach you something and you pay nothing for it.

P2: Notice that when we were young, we attended school totally for free, our parents didn't have to pay.

Another example? Do you remember that you were attacked a few months ago.

P1: Yes, of course I still have bruises.

P2: So then you also used your rights.

Memory 2 Policeman is walking down the stage. In another corner of the stage the mugging takes place. A person (mugger - with hood on his head ) bumps into another person (victim) and tries to take over victim's rucksack. The policeman notices it and comes as soon as it is possible. The mugger hits a victim, steals a rucksack and escapes. The policeman follows the offender (run!). After a few seconds the policeman appears.

Doctor: Are you OK?

Victim: Yes, thank you.

P1: You're right. Indeed, then I used both rights: to security of the police and health care. Yeah! I haven't realized that.

P2: Another example. Do you remember when we met with our friends one week ago?

Memory 3

Ateist: We have to meet finally! We haven't spoken for ages! Let's go out together!

The rest: Yes, yes! Great idea ☺

Muslim: But when?

Ateist: What about next Sunday?

Christian: No, no. I can't make it on Sunday. I have to go to church and then I have a family dinner.

Ateist: Really? OK. I understand. So maybe Saturday?

Jew: No, I can't. I'm a Jew and I have sabath then. Choose another day.

Ateist: So maybe Friday? Now we have to figure out where to go. Maybe this new pub in the town?

Muslim: No way! Have you forgotten? I don't drink alcohol. It's forbidden in my religion.

Ateist: Oh, yeah. OK. So let's have a barbecue.

Buddhist: I'm a vegetarian! In buddhism we don't eat meat.

Ateist: So coffee. I think it fits everyone.

The rest: Yeah, yeah. Ok. Yes.

Ateist: Don't you think it is great that despite we all represent different religions, we are still good friends. Good that there is freedom of religion.

P2: Moreover, you've been complaining about taxes. But who chose the government - citizens. Did you vote in the last elections?

P1: Yyy... No...

P2: That's what I'm taking about ...

Memory 3 People are putting vote cards into the box.
